"Softly as I

In no way did the excitement of the evening affect the ravenous appetites of the seniors.

Excited nominees to the Court twirl, once around lightly, as the judges ponder a most difficult decision.

DINNER DANCE

June 7, 1968

Senior officers present a token of esteem to Mr. Horgan, Mrs. McCullough, Miss Murphy, Mr. Ferris, and Miss Howard for their years of service as Class Advisors.

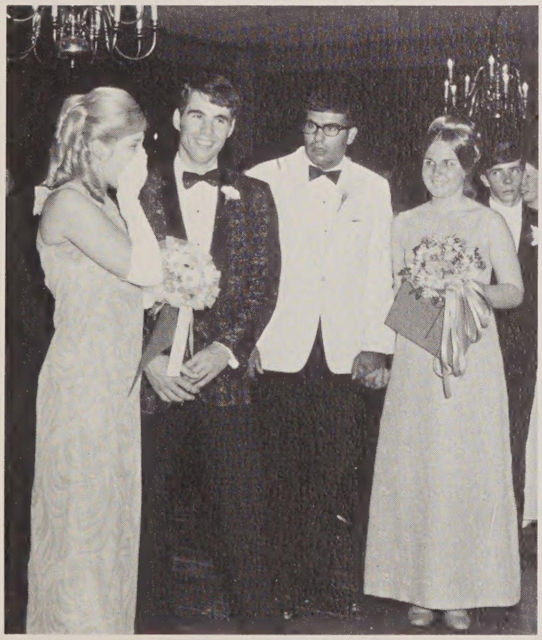
Unlike other years, the Class of 1968, held a formal dinner-dance at the Yankee Drummer Inn in Auburn. The atmosphere was one of reminiscence and sentiment, for it marked the last time we would share this type of sociability that had become so much a part of our four years together.

Seniors and their escorts participate in the Grand March.

Leave You..."

"We could have danced all night . . ."

Suzanne Sheperd, a glamorous queen, poses with Norman Rollo, her handsome escort for the evening.



The traditional "tears of happiness" as the decision of the judges is announced.

It was a never-to-be-forgotten evening—sophisticated and grandly mature—a fitting climax to herald the reflection of our adolescent years.

And when, too soon, the time to depart was upon us, one could almost hear the unspoken unity of the single sentiment: "'softly, as I leave you,' I will carry with me this special time we shared."

The queen and her entourage: Sue Borgland, Joyce Cote, Suzanne Sheperd, Eileen Friars and Mary Previe.

CLASS DAY

JUNE 12, 1968

Wendy Midgely and Stu Pouliot distribute flowers to Carol Sharpe and Cheryl Daviau.

Class Day, and all the excitement that marks the occasion! Are the Yearbooks ready? Are the entertainers in place? Where are the flowers? A glow of excitement and last-minute jitters, as the speakers review their remarks. A fun time. A time to display talents, and relive the nostalgic memories of the four years that passed all too swiftly. A time to single out the one individual, from so many, who gave so unselfishly to the success and happiness of others. A special and unique time, that will always live as a precious memory. And, as the class joins as one in its song "You'll Never Walk Alone," a lasting promise that the years we've shared have cemented bonds of friendship that will not erode with time!

Class Marshal, Joseph Raulinaitis, receives last-minute instructions from Miss Howard.

A touch of solemnity marks the Class Day Processional.

Walk Alone"

The thrilling tenor voice of Brian MacLeod, lent magic to the beautiful aria "Somewhere."

COGITO, ERGO SUM

Russell Staples and Michael Cramer complete a well-executed Clarinet duet.

A standing ovation for an "outstanding" Advisor, as Susan Douslin presents the 1968 Yearbook to Miss Pauline S. Howard to whom it was dedicated.

A Fitting

The bus is loaded, and seniors spill from the windows waving a "regretful" goodbye to school for the day!

"Mumps or no mumps, I'm going on this trip . . ."

"Well, now that we're here—where's the action?"

CLASS TRIPS

June 13, 1968

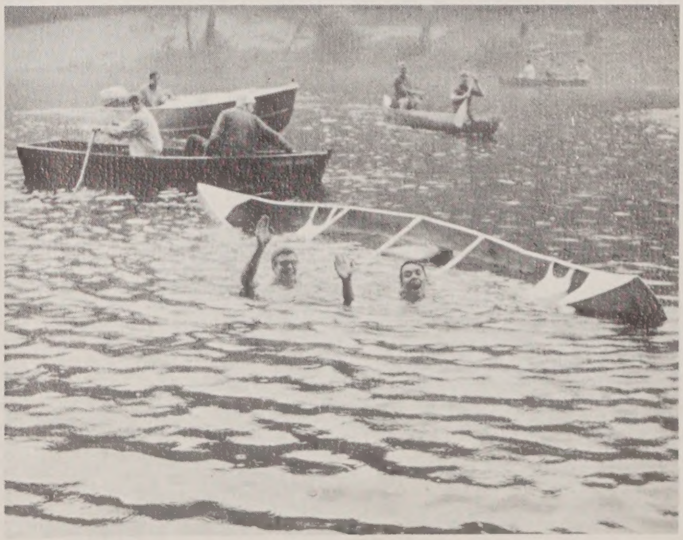
Host "Cuckoo" presents Stu Pouliot with his very own "Ted Hilton Chapeau."

Final Fling!

After a rough game of softball, the boys settle down to their magic act—making fried chicken disappear!

Bill Mattress and Dave McGuiness on a crocodile hunt.

Bob Sweet, Linda Angelico, Bev Marcimo and Sue Ablondi display the day's delicacies.



Crew Men Russ Staples and Ted White demonstrate what "not" to do in a canoe.

SHREWSBURY HIGH SCHOOL LIBRA

Wet...
Wearying...

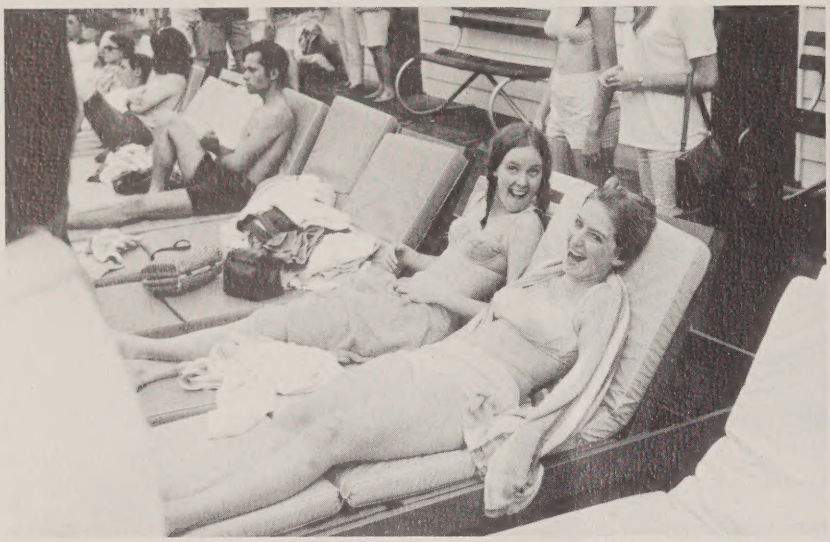
Wonderful...



At poolside, the scenery was worthy of watching as Kathy Carey and Jean Willoughby "rain-bathed."

Joyce Cote models her "itsy bitsy, teeny weeny" striped bikini, before giving it the water test!

Ping-Pong anyone? Mr. Ferris displays his winning form.

It rained! It rained! And it rained some more! But nothing in this world could have dampened our spirits. It was our Class Trip and we were together—and nothing else was important. And so, resplendent in our craziest gear (looking more like high school dropouts than graduates) we defied the elements and pretended the sun was casting its most glorious glow. We ate, and sang, and swam, and danced, and played, and ate some more.

And then, just as the time approached for us to leave Ted Hilton's Resort, in Moodus, Connecticut—old "Sol" peeked from behind a cloud and winked his eye—sorry, perhaps, that he had blown his chance to watch Shrewsbury Seniors enjoying their final "wild fling!"

"Aw, come on gang—it's no wetter in the pool than it is out here!"

"Cuckoo" hears some gems of wisdom from Mary-Lou Garganigo.

The "Rain Dance"—too deftly executed by Judy Donahue.

"Cogito;

Graduates, in preparation for their final processional.

Stuart Pouliot, senior president, presents Mr. Cooke with the class gift.

GRADUATION

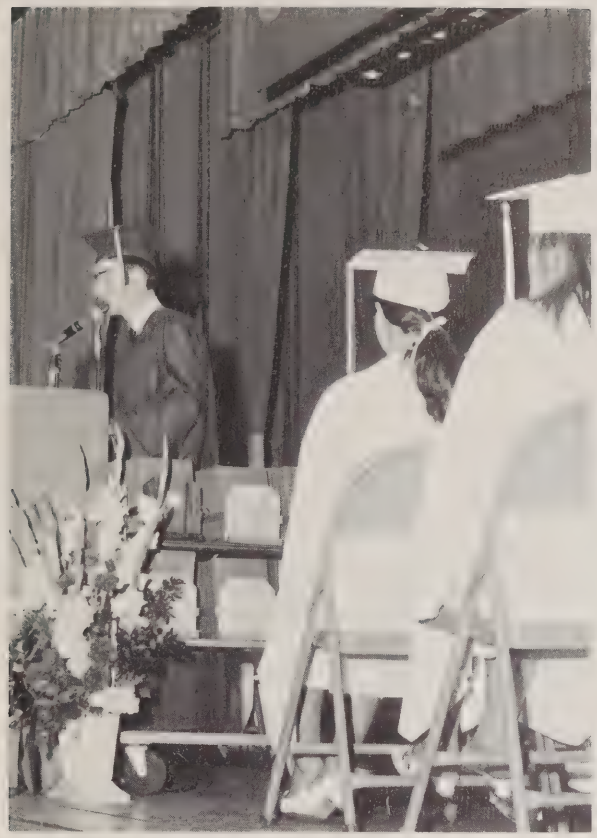
June 14, 1968

June 14, 1968! The strains of the high school orchestra filled the auditorium, signalling the graduation Processional, and the crowd stood in sombre silence as the seniors marched, in practiced unison, toward their assigned places on stage. Tear-stained cheeks were not an uncommon sight, as parents and graduates alike fought back sentiments that were an uncommon blend of sadness and pride. We had attained our long-sought goal, and the symbolic blue-and-gold diploma marked the tangible symbol of a passing chapter in the pages of our lives.

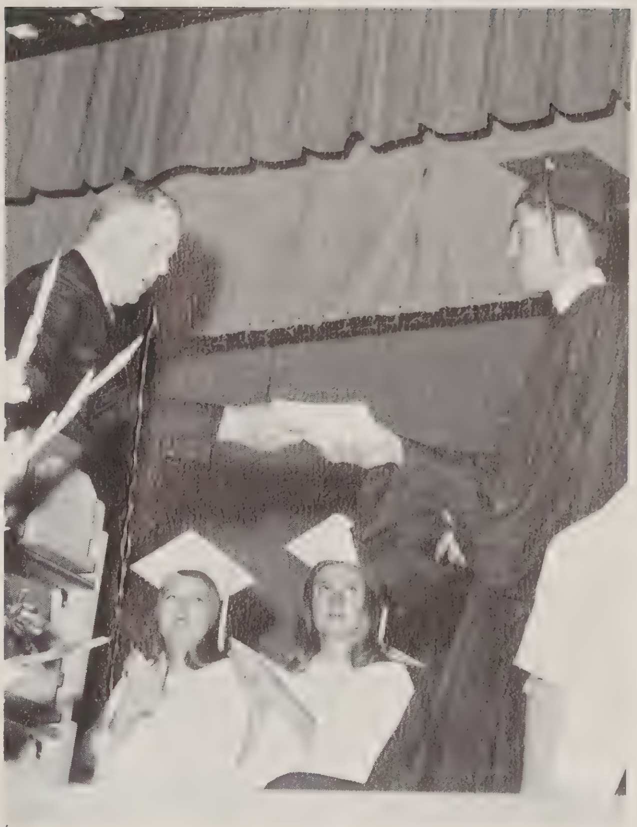
COGITO ERGO SUM

A warm welcome is extended to the parents and friends who filled the auditorium in tribute to the graduates.

Ergo Sum"



Paul Callan expressed his firm conviction that the young people of today are truly "A Unique Generation."



Charles Kaufman, Shrewsbury's answer to Albert Einstein, accepts the coveted Science Award.

Hugs and warm congratulations for a job well done!

In bold print, suspended overhead, burnished the words "Cogito; Ergo Sum" a fitting motto that spoke not only of our accomplishments during the past four years, but gave promise of our philosophy for the years to come: "I Think; Therefore I Am."

And so, we will face the trials of tomorrow with understanding and confidence, aware that "thought" is the nourishment of man, and his desire to seek truth is his hope and salvation for the future.

HREWSBURY HIGH SCHOOL LIB

The years have passed—four in all—and each holds its special memory. They were good years—years of learning and developing, of solidarity and belonging—a time when we became a part of all those we met.

Now, the hour has come to break our ties with the past, and set our sights on the future. It would be a callous misconception to say that this will be an easy task. It will be a difficult one, indeed. For here, within the strong confines of cold mortar and brick, we gathered a multitude of warm and vital memories. Here, we cemented the bonds of friendship, and shared the exhilaration of our victories and the remorse of our defeats. Here, rings the ever-haunting sound of our laughter in the halls, and the low drone of recognized voices sifting from the classrooms. Here, we played and participated, worked and wondered, listened and learned. Here, walks the familiar figures and faces of educators and administrators, who played such an integral part in our lives, and who cultured and cultivated a dominant part of our thinking. Here, we were known and, here, we became a part of all those we met.

We learned much in four years. We learned to reason and to think, and to assume responsibility. We learned to appreciate the beauty of music and art, and bask in the thrill of participation. We learned to memorize, and synthesize, and rationalize. We learned to savor the wealth of words, and to wrestle with their meaning. We learned to cultivate an insatiable desire to find, and mold, and understand the truth. We learned that the process of learning was one that knows no end.

And, so it was that we prepared ourselves for this eventuality—this time when we must sever the bonds of a lifetime, and face the future alone. However, we will not soon forget this place of our youth . . . this school that sowed and shaped the seeds of our destiny. One day, each of us will say with innate pride: "it was there my mind was nurtured and fed . . . it was there the light of friendship gave substance to my growth . . . it was there I dreamed my dreams and spun my fantasies . . . it was there I planted my roots, and realized the fruit of my manhood. And, gratefully, I AM A PART OF ALL THAT I HAVE MET, and, in turn, all that I met became the essence of all that I am."

We move forward now, two-hundred-and-thirty strong. We face a world of conflict and trial. Yet, we still our fears, strong in the conviction that we are a determined generation; and, in that determination, we will do what must be done. Our love of liberty, and pride in country will not let us turn our backs on responsibility. We, the Class of 1968, are ready and able to face the challenge of the future. And, God willing, we will fulfill our destiny with the honor and integrity with which we have been so aptly, and generously, endowed.

I AM A PART OF ALL THAT I HAVE MET

An active class adviser, Miss Howard discusses class business with President Stuart Pouliot.

Miss Howard, a fine teacher, takes an interest in the progress of her students.

A teacher is a person who trains and instructs people, but to be a respected and admired teacher one must do more than educate. A teacher must be devoted to her students both academically and socially, having an influence on their personal educational training. Besides being a teacher to her students she must be a friend who will listen to them when they have problems, give constructive criticism when they are in need of it, and laugh with them when they have happiness to share.

The class adviser to whom we have dedicated this yearbook is such a person. She has devoted many of her hours not only to her students and the Spanish Club, but to our class, helping us to plan our projects and overcome our problems. She has been well prepared to carry out these duties for she has travelled throughout Europe and the United States, acquiring a better understanding of people and their heritage. Her efficiency as adviser and concern for the well being of our class has been a great asset.

Upon leaving high school we will take with us the many fond memories of our fine teacher, adviser, and friend—that is why we are to dedicate the 1968 Colonial to . . .

Relaxing in Venice—one of the many places she has visited.

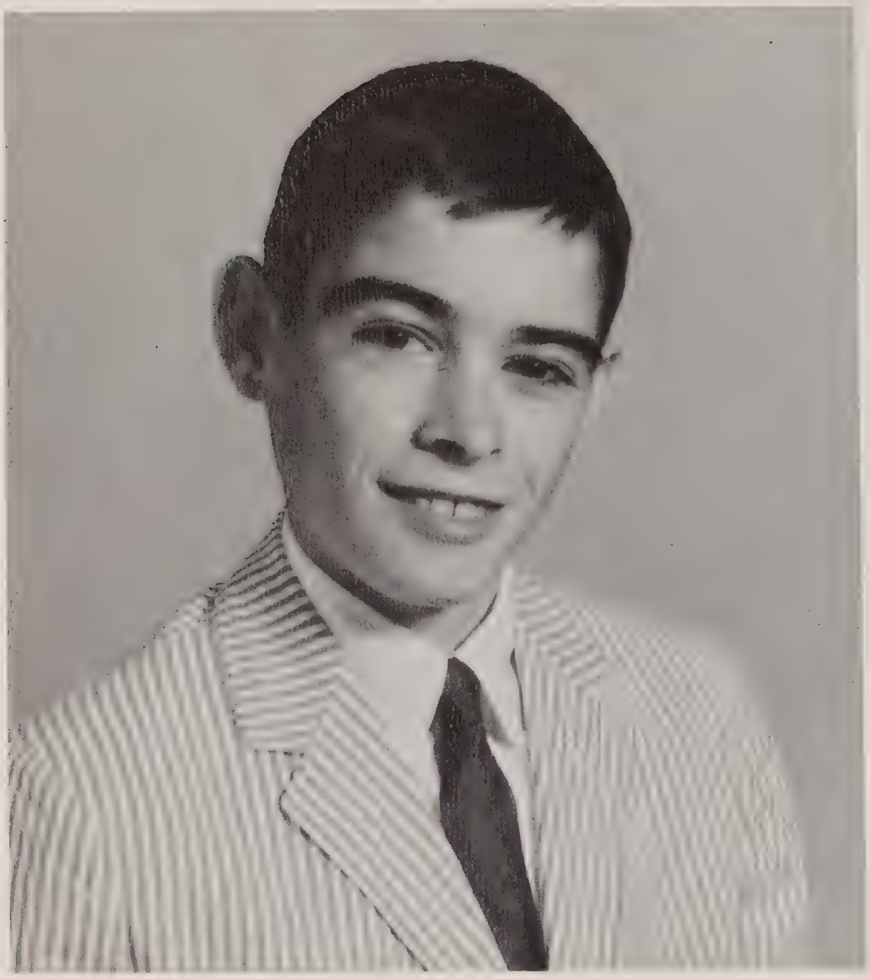
In Memoriam



Robert T. Haynes

"To Bob"

Almighty God
Watch over him for us;
For he was gentle in heart,
And courageous in life.

And if, as he believed,
Death is but the beginning of life anew;
Then, let our faith
Be lasting tribute to his immortality.

We walk without him now . . . this gentle boy who loved to laugh. We miss him . . . for he was a friend. A boy who took life by the hand, and strode proud and tall at its side. A boy who did not tarry, nor look back at what "might have been". A boy who was all that we could ever hope to be, and more. God knows, we are better human beings for having known him. His inspiration, his strength, and his abounding and boundless love. And now, as we move forward to meet a troubled and war-weary world, we would believe that he has found peace with his God . . . his Creator, whom he loved so well. We would believe that he has found his place, and would have us move on to find ours. May God grant him all that is good and sweet, and instill, in each of us, the courage to carry our burden as valiantly and unselfishly as Bob carried his.

English Department

With the opening of the 1967-1968 school year, the English Department was being guided by a new Director, Mr. Allan Smallidge. His philosophy was quickly felt in the stress that was being placed not only on the mechanical aspects of the English language, but also its creative phases. The appreciation of English literature is supplemented with informative films, recordings of renowned personalities, and field trips to theaters and playhouses where the students can more directly appreciate the works they have studied in the classrooms. Great emphasis is also placed on oral English by way of speech classes and exposition lessons. In addition the Department encourages active participation in the English extracurricular activities.

Mathematics Department

Through Mathematics a student learns to reason logically. At Shrewsbury courses in business maths, algebra, geometry, and advanced math are offered to give the student a thorough background. This year, Shrewsbury was fortunate in having some exceptional math students—or as Mr. Jacobs would say, our own "Brain trust". These students completed all of Shrewsbury's Math courses by the end of their Junior year, and went on to independent study during their Senior year. The Math Club gives students an opportunity to compete with Math scholars from other schools and compare their backgrounds with our own.

Our teachers present courses in Physics, Chemistry, Biology, General Science and Physiology. The faculty supervises field trips to the Boston Museum of Science and an enrichment course in Physics at Tahanto Regional High School. Shrewsbury High also participates in the Science for Action Program at the University of Massachusetts and the Junior Engineering and Science Symposium at Worcester Polytechnic Institute. The academic year is culminated with the highly competitive contest, the Science Fair, in which teachers and students coordinate their efforts to create a success.

In our rapidly changing world, it is vital that the individual understands what is happening around him. At Shrewsbury High School, the Social Studies Department offers the student a well-rounded program in American History, Civics, World History, Problems of Democracy, and World Geography. Incorporated in these courses are the basic principles of economics and other social sciences. This year the emphasis has been on contemporary happenings. Through the use of audio-visual aids, tape recordings, and informative lectures by renowned speakers of the area, the student has become aware of the world around him. He has discovered that history is not merely dates or place names of the past, but the story of mankind through the centuries. The Social Studies Department at Shrewsbury High School more than fulfills its purpose of providing the students with a useful understanding of social, political, economic, and international affairs.

Studying a language helps a student better understand the people and customs of other countries. A broadened understanding of one's native language is also acquired through the knowledge of another tongue. At Shrewsbury, an excellent staff gives students the opportunity to study in depth French, Latin, and Spanish. The spoken language is brought to the student in both the classroom and the language laboratory, which has just received new earphones to keep it up to date. Filmstrips, recordings, and tapes also reinforce the strong programs in each course.

The girls in SHOMTY are often heard saying that 'business is our business'. That statement is even more true and applicable to the Business Education Department. It is becoming more increasingly apparent that business and commerce have aided the good life in the United States and that without them our progress in other fields would not be as great.

The very able members of the Business Education Department not merely impart the principles of business in their class instructions but try to instill the proper attitude and appreciation of business's role in our way of life. The students are not merely trained to attain a good position in the work-a-day world and thereby be self-sustaining but are also guided in becoming prolific producers in our economy and prudent consumers and managers in their personal lives.

In recent years, educators have been awakened to the growing need for the development of sound and strong bodies, to complement sound and strong minds. Shrewsbury's competent "Phys Ed" staff is responsible for fulfilling this necessary athletic proficiency among both genders.

Weekly gym classes provide the groundwork for formulating physical development and coordination, instilling good sportsmanship, and endowing students with the opportunity to exploit both "team" and ""individual" athletic skills and agility.

Objectively, the soundness of this program has borne fruit. Its resounding success is evident in the glowing athletic records achieved by SHS in all fields of competitive, inter-school sports.

Guidance Department

Mr. James J. Dorsey
Department Head

The doors of the Shrewsbury High Guidance Department are always open to a student from Freshman to Senior and often time to previous graduates. The diversification in the councilors' training has allowed a student to feel secure in talking about life at home, interests, and future plans. Without the advice and future planning in the Freshman year by the department, many Seniors would not have gotten to the college of their choice or any college at all. The guidance department does not aid only the college-bound students but the business students are also helped to choose the careers which they intend to encounter after graduation. Between the years of filling out schedules in the Freshman year and asking for a recommendation in our Senior year, we have wandered through their doors asking for advice on some big problems we managed to have—only to find out that they were very trivial after a little talk. In moments of frustration we looked toward them to have some method of resolving what we couldn't. Throughout the years this department has skillfully aided the once frail and often frightened Freshman into becoming an individual Senior with knowledge to stand on his own two feet and look onto the world with open eyes after graduation . . . and not to be afraid of what he sees.

Home Economics Department

It is in the Home Economic suite of rooms that life is graciously and efficiently lived, or better to say where one can learn how to live life in that manner. It is here in this Department under the very capable instructions that girls learn how avoid drudgery and monotony in home-making and housekeeping. From the books they learn the science but it is from the capable teachers that they acquire the art. If the home is the mainstay of our society, how greatly important are those who guide in showing how to create the good and efficient home!

Not all art is taught in the school's Art Department. Think of the functional art that is evoked by the Industrial Arts Department. At the end of every school year we are reminded by I.A. Exhibition what can be wrought from wood and metal machines. The Industrial Arts Department's competent personnel does not merely train the hands of its students but they show and guide the classes how to create functional beauty that can serve the basic needs of everyone's life. From the expanded drafting classes to the growing electronics course the I.A. Department is showing the increasing dependence on the industrial arts.

Art Department

Art is one of the many outlets for creativity and self-expression. The Art Department strives to encourage the latent creativity of the students. The capable instructors employ many media for the training of their classes. This enables the art enthusiast to experiment and develop his own talent in different fields. The Art rooms are a prolific center of beauty which contribute a fine aura and feeling throughout the whole school. Class instruction is supplemented by field trips to the area museums. Recognition is constantly given to the efforts of the students by the weekly displays in the Art show case. A big project this year, aside from the end-of-the-year exhibit was the creation of a corridor-long montage whose theme was STOP SMOKING. For the students enrolled, and for all others as well, art instructions and displays are bound to have a life-long impact.

Music Department

At Shrewsbury High School, the Music Department's purpose is to enrich the student by showing him how music can play an enjoyable part in his life. Members of the three music groups, band, orchestra, and glee club, are taught rhythm, harmony, and tone, and how to combine with others to produce pleasing sounds. By playing in groups these students learn to appreciate music and become aware of the intricacies involved in creating melodies. The Christmas and Spring Concerts, performances in various assemblies, and the ceremonies for class day and graduation give students reason for the long rehearsal hours and weeks of preparation. The band also finds time to play at pep rallies, football games, and parades. Music festivals, a trip to Boston Pops, ensemble concerts, solo opportunities, and auditions for All-District and All-State groups enable the interested student to broaden his musical background and experience. The Music Department realizes that for most students, music will not occupy the center of their lives, but it strives to obtain excellence in all it does and give the ordinary person a deeper appreciation of music.

The performance of any public school should not be tested just by the achievement of its student but also by the performance of the front office as well. We in Shrewsbury High can readily say that the efficiency of our school is due in no small part to the excellence of the office personnel. Though the attention of the public may be given to the genuine educational work carried on, without the excellent prior preparation to the school year, the record keeping during the year, and the mountains of detailed and important work after the year closes, all our educational efforts would only half succeed. It is the office personnel that does all this wonderful work without fanfare or seeking after glory.

Librarian

Perhaps one could say that it is in school libraries that the very real education of an individual actually takes place. In the classroom education is a cooperative effort. In the school library a student learns by his own effort and research. If the school school library is run as efficiently as is the Shrewsbury school library, then one's individual striving is even more fruitful and rewarding. The knowledge, efficiency and personal concern of our Librarian, Mrs. Ober aids our individual study immeasurably.

Mrs. Nancy M. Ober

Nurse

The concern of the community and school officials in the physical well-being of the students is symbolized in the person of the efficient School Nurse, Mrs. Quatela. Their concern is not just to treat medically after something has happened but to carry on preventive programs and hygienic instructions. Mrs. Quatela is often seen in the various homerooms with her assistants carrying out the well planned health program. To her and her staff we owe much for our physical well-being.

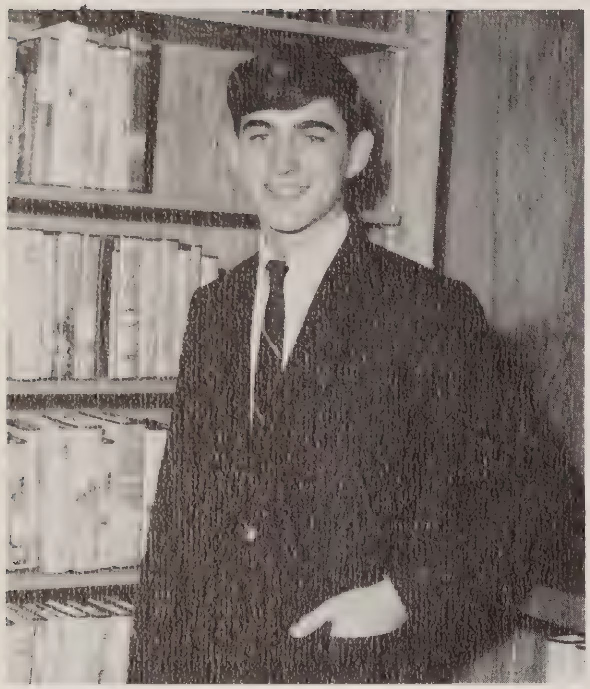
Responsible Leadership



Stuart Pouliot
President

Many of us at one time have said that we are glad to graduate, but deep down I think all of us are sad to leave high school. In high school we made new friends while receiving an education. We acquired a sense of responsibility outside the classroom, whether it was an officer of a club or a member of a team. In high school we also set our goals and attitudes for our lives after graduation.

Everything we have done in the past three years has been successful only because of our willingness to accept responsibility and work. When we were faced with a difficult project, we all came together like a family, only to succeed with a great pride of accomplishment.

Our experiences of being together and having responsibility will help us take an active role as the future leaders and citizens of our country. Some of us will probably face obstacles in our future, but I am sure that if we retain the principles and attitudes that we have developed in Shrewsbury High many of us will live productive and meaningful lives.

Mr. James Horgan

The Class of 1968 is indebted to its five industrious advisers whose intelligent guidance and kind patience played an essential role in the success of our class. The mature assistance of these dedicated men and women along with the hard work of willing students have made the history of the class of 1968 one of accomplishment. Their real and unselfish devotion have encouraged us in the pursuit of higher goals.

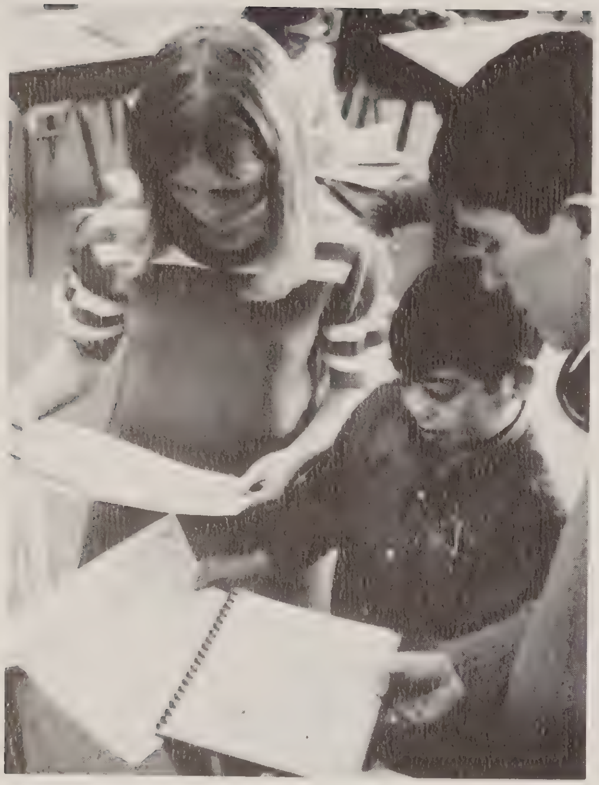
Activities

Man's spirit finds recreation and delight in a mere change of activity.



In order to have an up-to-date student body, Chris Melanson, Tom Grosso and Bob Ricker plan the school calendar.

Student Council members Kathy Kelley and Carol Halkerston make voting, in school elections, a pleasure.

"A funny thing happened to me on the way to the Forum . . ."

Lunch periods too short? Believe improvement or functional change is necessary in some school area? Want a bus for transportation to and from a varsity game? Contact the Student Council! Their eighteen elected members are responsible for hearing your grievances and suggestions and acting upon them. In their capacity as liasion between administration and student body, they steadfastly serve the needs of those they represent. Their leadership, in this regard, has been influential in maintaining a smooth-running, efficient, and harmonious form of student government.

Leadership training, school elections, biannual sale of book covers, selection of a Jewish War Veteran representative, publication of the school calendar, presentation of the "Thanksgiving Day" football trophy, and maintenance of a suggestion box, are but a few of their in-service activities. This year, a new scoreboard, sanded bleachers, a revised dress code, and a worthwhile fund-raising campaign for the St. Jude Leukemia Foundation can be listed among their plaudits.

Their service to the school has been exemplary, and has substantiated a high standard of respect from faculty and students alike. They are an interested, hard-working, school-spirited group of which we can all be proud. Most assuredly, the Student Council is indicative of "Democracy at Work!"

The curtain rises . . . a sudden hush envelops the audience . . . the play commences.

These are the final products of many months of hard work. It is the long hours of rehearsals, the unending labor of the light and stage crews, the unceasing hum of the sewing machines and most of all, the undying dedication of our director; Mr. Kevin J. Rose. With his help, guidance, and patience the play slowly and painstakingly becomes a finished product.

Masque & Wig has become a well renowned club, not only within the confines of S.H.S., but throughout the state of Massachusetts. They have been honored at both Regional and State Drama Festivals and have captured best actor awards in both contests.

The curtain once again falls on the stage ending another year, but the memories in the hearts and minds of all the members of Masque & Wig will never cease to be called upon when thinking of the good times.

An expression of mood and opinion, and the art of interpretation and argument—these are the tools of the National Forensic League!

The intellectual preparation, the demanding skill and work, and the spirit of exacting and fierce competition are inbred in each member who selects to join its ranks. Acutely aware of the growing need for young people to gain poise and confidence, NFL'ers constantly seek to improve their impetus in the fields of debate, extemporaneous speech, humorous and dramatic interpretation, and original oratory. Shrewsbury's excellence in meeting the gruelling demands in these fields is evident in the many hard-earned awards that replete its trophy case.

From the ranks of its young, enthusiastic members will, one day, rise the statesmen, lawyers, and diplomats whose awareness of current affairs and ability to express themselves with intelligence and credibility, will find its selective place in a well-informed, articulate society. It is natural then, that the town, the administration, and the student body manifests such great pride in the excellence personified by the National Forensic League. The preeminence in performance, displayed by its members in their chosen task, has sparked nation-wide admiration and acclaim. Their weapon is the power of knowledgeable persuasion . . . most assuredly, this potent force can prove "mightier than the sword!"

Humorous dialogue tickles the fancy of Paul Callan, and Tim Atwood.

THE IDES OF MARCH

Linda! Beware The Ides of March!

For the valiant students that yearly struggle through the Commentaries of Caesar and Cicero's Orations, the Latin Club provides a form of relaxation and explanation. Its organization is patterned on that of ancient Rome, with Linda Angelico serving as Consul and Karen Koskinen as Scribe.

The seventeen members of the club meet at monthly meetings. They are guided by their advisers, Miss Pauline Howard and Mr. Henry Sullivan. The Activities Chairmen, Joyce Bartlett and Gary Sooy, try to coordinate programs for the Latin Club. A meeting may be to see a film series on ancient Rome or even a Latin Spelling bee. The members of the club enjoy visiting area museums to see the arts of Italy and Greece. All the activities of the club are centered on being able to provide a culture of the people whose language they study.

Le cercle Francais, with a membership of over sixty students, has brought the study of French beyond the classroom level. Its dedicated members have participated enthusiastically in all its activities from French College Bowl and club projects to its annual Fete de Noel. The French Club Banquet, held at Le Petit Auberge, offers an obstacle to be overcome by members, when all must order their meal en francais! Le Cercle Francais not only captures the Parisian atmosphere and culture, but also strives to provide the student with a better understanding of the French language and society, in order that they may grasp the real meaning of the language they study.

"El Circulo de Espanol" is a club for students who wish to broaden their knowledge concerning the Spanish language. The club enables its members to practice the Spanish learned in the classroom and it attempts to instill in them a desire to continue study in the language. Through the club's various activities, such as Spanish College Bowl and the viewing of slides, the members are educated in the history, geography, and customs of Spanish-speaking countries throughout the world. Each year the club also undertakes the sponsoring of a Peruvian child's education with the funds raised from dues and the cake sale. The club ends each year by gathering for its banquet and having a "fiesta".

The Band is one of the three music groups at Shrewsbury High School. Students who are talented in playing various instruments join together under the direction of Mr. Lorne Ford to create musical sound. They have a busy year of music. In the fall the Band prepares for football games and pep rallies with rousing marches and military drills. Various students are also auditioning for All-District Band. After Thanksgiving work begins on a program for the Christmas Concert. Besides the traditional carols, the Band joins with the Glee Club to present combined numbers. This year the groups performed the Hallelujah Chorus from the Messiah. In the winter the Band begins rehearsing a spring program and participating in various solo and ensemble festivals. The year ends with the Pops Concert and the Memorial Day Parade. The members cannot help but gain musical knowledge from their participation in the Band and learn to enjoy working with other people to create music.

The Orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Ralph Metcalf, performs admirably at several school functions—National Honor Installation, Thanksgiving assembly, Christmas Concert, and graduation. The group is made up of eleven string players who often perform in an ensemble or with wind and percussion players from the Band. The Orchestra attends many music festivals and players perform solos or group pieces. Many hours of school and home practice go into every performance, and the results are always rewarding. The Orchestra provides invaluable experience in speaking the world's universal language.

One Sings

The silence before Handel's glorious "Messiah."

At Shrewsbury High School we are taught the value of being able to express ourselves well. In addition to the usual speaking and writing, music is also used to tell stories and to express our innermost feelings, thoughts, and emotions.

Under the direction of Louis Vella in former years, the Shrewsbury High School Glee Club has built up a high standard of performance, and its several annual concerts have been enjoyed by all those who attend. In spite of Mr. Vella's leaving this year, the Glee Club has still strived to maintain its commendable reputation, and has, under the direction of Mr. Osmun, Mr. Lorne Ford, and Mr. Jack Feldheimer, presented fine Christmas and Spring concerts.

Whether it is in a work of Bach or in a work of Rodger's and Hammerstein, the sixty voices that are heard three times weekly in the auditorium are capable of blending together to create a rich sound pleasing to any ear. The members of the Shrewsbury High School Glee Club raise their voices and convey a message to all who listen.

Every Tuesday night the members of the A Cappella Choir rehearse together at the high school.

Every four weeks the students of Shrewsbury High School await the delivery of their school's newspaper, the Town Crier. There is always something in every issue that catches the eye, whether it is the interviews, spotlights, sports review, or the editorials. Then again, it may be the popular Tobias Howe or those simply wonderful class pictures of elementary school days. Mr. Tsombakos, the hard-working Adviser, imparts in his journalism classes that certain way to add a touch of "know-how" to the editorials and features that appear regularly. The newspaper acts as the communication link between our administration, faculty and student body because sometimes it will be an aptly stated comment that will set the readers to thinking, discussing and then acting for the good of our school community.

You know when you hear the "presses rolling" under the stairs near Room 209 that hard work and long planning are being exerted for the next issue. It is the school paper that makes for more unity and identity in our school activities.

The Shrewsbury High Science Club is an organization of ambitious, intelligent, and dedicated students. Under the capable leadership of Mr. Charles Ferris and Mr. Joseph Pare, they endeavor to acquire a broader knowledge of the problems which face scientists today. Under the capable leadership of Mr. Flynn and the student officers, the club has planned many very ambitious projects . . . including a trip to Florida to visit Cape Kennedy and a candy sale to pay for it. They have also held several altitude competitions. These are some of the people Shrewsbury will be proud of in the years to come.

The members of the Shrewsbury High Junior Red Cross are a busy and industrious group. Never a month goes by without some project being accomplished. In the recent weeks, a drive for funds has been completed, but the homeroom representatives of this fine organization were disappointed in the lack of interest and small amount of donations collected.

At Christmas time, a plea was entered for Christmas cards to be sent to the patients of nursing homes and hospitals in the area. Many cards were contributed, and this project was a great success with the elderly people, who often receive no cards during the holiday season.

This month, a box is being readied to send to Vietnam. It will contain school supplies, canned food, and clothing for the children of South Vietnam. But if projects such as these are to be continued for the betterment of people, we must have more support. The Junior Red Cross needs your help, your donations, and your fair share of time and effort if we are to continue with this worthwhile organization.

What are you hiding in that file, Cheryl?

Cindy Vishnja seems to be enjoying whatever she is hearing on that dictaphone.

Shomty's new officers preside over the opening meeting.

Preparing a girl for a successful career in the business world is the purpose of Shomty, a commercial club for junior and senior girls who are taking at least two business courses. This past year, with the aid of lectures and demonstrations, the girls learned the use of new office machines and the social graces of an efficient businesswoman. Some of the club's projects and activities included the annual welcoming party for new members, a Christmas party, with the giving of a gift basket to the Worcester State Hospital, and a banquet at the end of the year. A candy sale was held to help raise funds to support these activities. Through these many projects, Shomty prepares the girls to accept the responsibilities of future jobs and to become better leaders in the business world.

The business teachers help themselves to refreshments at the welcoming reception.

As far back as we can remember the 020 Club has been a most ambitious and inspiring group. It consists of an exclusive twenty five members who devote their spare time to shelving, covering, cataloging, and repairing books for the library. They work diligently under the leadership of Mrs. Nancy Ober, our school librarian. Because of each member's unique attitude, students feel confident of success each time they enter the library doors. Marylou Lordon, the club's president, allows free time to be combined with social events. Picnics, parties, and gay times are not uncommon to the members of the club.

This year marks the first anniversary of the entrance of the Shrewsbury High Homemaking Club into The Future Homemakers of America. This national organization is dedicated to preparing young women for their future roles as wives, mothers, and citizens. The Shrewsbury chapter has placed an emphasis on projects for the communities such as stuffed animals for orphans, afghans for a local nursing home, and Thanksgiving baskets for needy families. These girls are ready to "face the future with warm courage and high hopes," as their creed decrees.

Adviser Mrs. King and a few members proudly display Thanksgiving baskets.

"We try harder."

Under the enthusiastic leadership of Mr. Cote, the Math Club has been led on to many victories making it one of the top three clubs in Southern Worcester County. Every two weeks, in room B-29, you will see its faithful members learning the tricks and equations to make them better mathematicians. Four times a year, the club chooses ten of its members to go to math meets which are held in surrounding schools. Here they compete for fun; trying their hardest to win the first place trophy. Also they enter two other meets which are exclusively for Freshmen.

Exhibits and experiments covering the fields of Biology, Chemistry and Physics filled the high school gymnasium and overflowed into adjoining rooms—an overwhelming tribute to the popularity of the SHS Science Fair! The exceedingly fine displays of the students were highlighted when their overall efforts were recognized with ribbons and awards in each division. The always-popular fair provides an encouraging outlet for aspiring young scientists who recognize the importance of the realm of discovery in a modern era—a "scientific" era which, one day, will change the face of the world!

Exhibits for the fair entail many exacting and painstaking preparations. Ask Bob Steinberg and Ken Phillips!

September 23—Marlboro An alert Marlboro offense capitalized on a few breaks and some fierce blocking to soundly trounce the Colonials—Marlboro 37 Shrewsbury 16

September 30—Maynard A revitalized Blue and Gold won its first game in a convincing fashion with the help of a superior defensive effort—Maynard 12 Shrewsbury 20

October 7—Trade On the strength of Ralph Estaphan's touchdown run, Shrewsbury emerged victorious over a spirited Trade eleven in a see-saw affair—Trade 22 Shrewsbury 28

October 14—Milford Shrewsbury's offense finally jelled behind Vin Moore and Bill Mattress as the Colonials prevailed over the Scarlets—Milford 8 Shrewsbury 22

October 21—Wachusett The Colonials wasted little time in asserting their superiority in this game. Again, Mattress and Moore provided the offensive fireworks—Wachusett 6 Shrewsbury 26

October 28—St. John's Bill Mattress returned a kick-off for a touchdown, and an unsung defensive unit kept the Pioneers in check as Shrewsbury recorded victory no. 5—St. John's 8 Shrewsbury 14

November 4—Algonquin The Tomahawks ran roughshod over an erring Colonial football team, thus snapping Shrewsbury's victory skein—Algonquin 27 Shrewsbury 12

November 11—Northbridge A trio of elusive halfbacks, Bill Robinson, Ken Phoenix, and Ralph Estaphan propelled the Blue and Gold back onto the winning trail—Northbridge 14 Shrewsbury 24

November 23—Auburn The entire football force was instrumental in outclassing Auburn on Thanksgiving. "Ole Man Weather" was even sympathetic to the visitors; a wet, muddy field prevented the Colonials from completely overwhelming the Dandies—Auburn 8 Shrewsbury 22

Ted Stimets Award

The Thanksgiving Day football game always brings out the best in a Shrewsbury gridder for two reasons: the game signifies the end of a career for a senior, and also means the presentation of the Ted Stimets Award to the outstanding Colonial football player; and this latter serves as an added impetus.

This year fullback Bill Robinson was chosen as the award winner. It was most fitting that Bill received the Stimets trophy because at one point in the season he was ready to hang up his cleats. A fractured hand sustained in an early season scrimmage forced Bill to miss five games. However, the mark of an exceptional athlete is that he can come back and make the big play. Bill Robinson proved beyond a doubt that he is an exceptional athlete by his sterling offensive and defensive performance on Thanksgiving Day.

Most Valuable Player Award

Halfback Bill Mattress was accorded the highest accolade that a Shrewsbury grider is capable of attaining, when he was named the recipient of the Coaches' Award. This award is given annually to the player who contributes the most to the team. Mattress' storybook runs were invaluable in assuring another successful Colonial football campaign.

At 5'9" and 185 lbs., Mattress is a compact, rugged athlete who can hit into any defensive line with fury. Bill also exhibits an exceptional knack for broken-field running; more than once he has broken a game wide-open with his fleet-footed heroics.

Shrewsbury recorded a fine 7-2 slate this year, thanks a great deal to M.V.P. Bill Mattress.

Parade

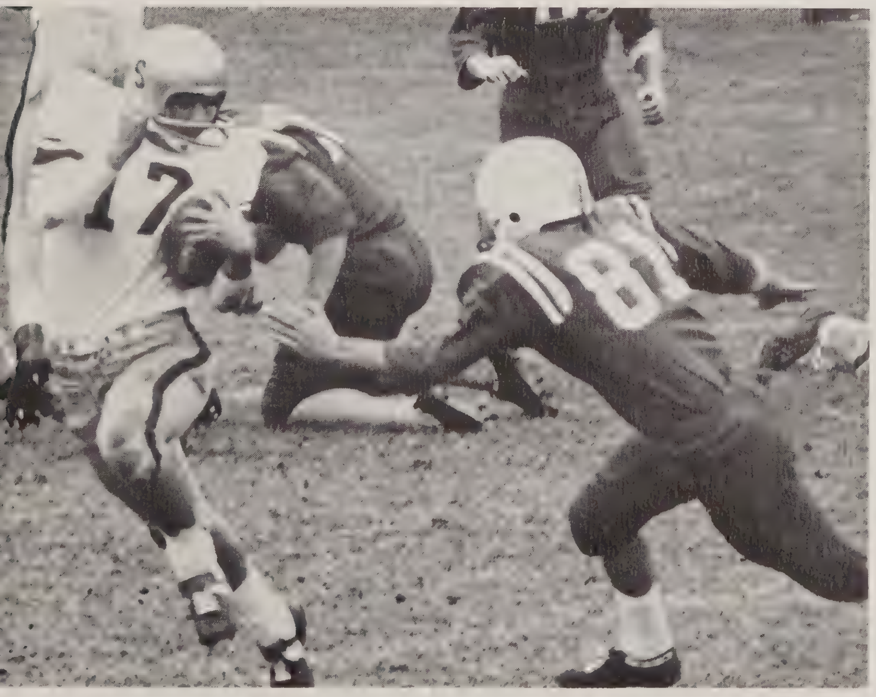
"IQ" appraises the ensuing action.

The advent of the 1967 football season brought little pleasure to Shrewsbury High grid fans. Coach Marchisio had fielded the smallest Shrewsbury team in years, and the experts predicted that we "would be hard-pressed to compile a winning season. A good deal of last year's starters had graduated . . . the line wasn't big enough . . . the backfield lacked experience." The odds for another winning season seemed insurmountable, and the situation appeared hopeless.

But still, the team practiced . . . through the almost unbearable heat of August and the biting, bitter cold of November . . . in the rain . . . in the snow. Calisthenics, wind-sprints, block and tackle, hit that other man harder and quicker than he has ever been hit before. They ironed out the flaws, learned signals, and worked for perfection as a unit.

The first outing was against Marlboro . . . frustration and defeat. It looked as though the prophecy was accurate—that is, to everyone but the team! For in discounting Shrewsbury as a football threat, the prognosticators had forgotten the fiery spirit, and the fighting heart that "is" Shrewsbury. But we did not let them forget for long! Suddenly, eleven determined individuals soldered into one, and Shrewsbury had a team that refused to be beaten. True, a superior Algonquin squad handed us a second defeat, but two defeats against seven wins including a grudge-match victory over arch-rival St. John's was a record to be envied.

The cheers have subsided, and the equipment is neatly stored away, but the proud spirit of the team rings on in the memory. Let's give a last cheer to the 1967 Shrewsbury High football team. They proved to us that a physically "small" team can perform miracles . . . especially if the spirit and the heart is "big" enough!



Halfback Bill Mattress dances out of the grasp of a Wachusett defender.

With his galoshes and raincoat, Coach Mario Marchisio beat the weather, not to mention the Auburn Dandies.

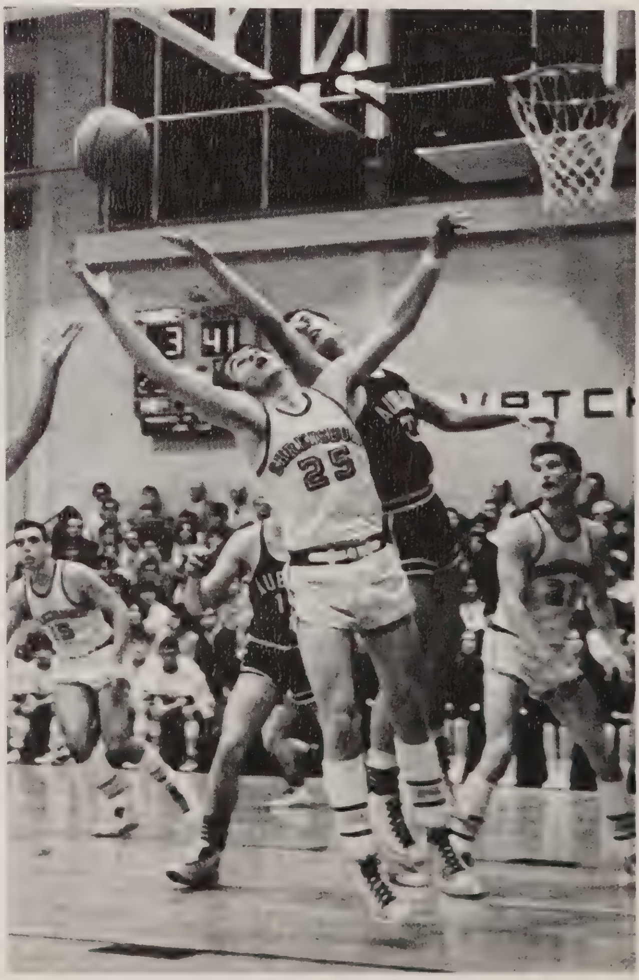
Vin Moore outleaps an Auburn cager while Mike Sireci looks on.



When winter officially arrived, Shrewsbury's loyal rooters made the transition from the gridiron into the gymnasium to support their basketball team. These hardwood fanatics were amply rewarded as their cagers recorded an unblemished slate. This was undoubtedly THE YEAR of the COLONIAL.

We started off impressively with an awesome display of offense in a big win over Hudson. Clinton, Wachusett, and Maynard were subsequently buried by the rampaging Blue and Gold. Before long, we had established our supremacy in the Central Mass. Conference. When our victory skein began to mount, we became a marked ball club. By then, however, the Colonials weren't to be denied. Finishing the season strongly with a comparatively easy victory over Auburn, we then turned our attention to the Clark Tournament. In a grudge battle with the Westboro Rangers, Shrewsbury emerged victorious adding the Clark laurels to their lengthy list of accomplishments.

the Colonial

The Shrewsbury varsity basketball troupe achieved such great success this season because of an outstanding team effort. But what is often overlooked by many is the fact that this team was composed of some unique individuals. To understand the success of the cagers is to know each of the players. Co-captain Butch Vuona, swift backcourt operator, was our own floor general, our "quarterback". The most consistent rebounder and scorer was co-captain Vin Moore, our leader. The BIG man was massive Ken Largess, our coach on the floor—an indispensable rebounder. Mike Sireci complemented his teammates brilliantly with his strong-armed rebounding heroics. The Blue and Gold's most prolific scorer was versatile Ed Orrizzi, "Super Soph". Equally responsible for the fortunes of the Colonials were the reserves, the midget crew. Among this group were "Bad Ankles", Bobby, Ralph, Jack, and Henry. This was a team that will long be remembered in the Shrewsbury basketball annals.

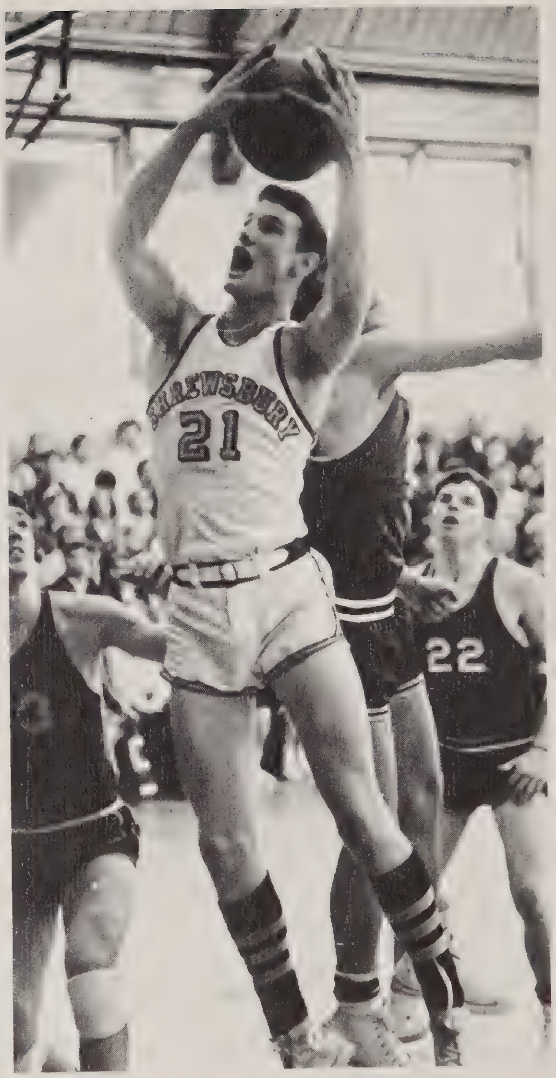
Coach Paquette briefs his team prior to the start of the second half.



While hauling down a big rebound, Mike Sireci appears to be quite overcome.

Merely in his third year as basketball coach at Shrewsbury, William "Bill" Paquette has already established a hardwood dynasty. For the second consecutive year, a Paquette-coached Blue and Gold has dominated its league, the Central Massachusetts Conference. By finishing the season with a highly respectable 18-0 record, the Colonials have again qualified for a birth in the District III competition.

There is no intricate success formula which Coach Paquette employs. Practices are simply devoted to running and shooting. However, the most significant factor in the fortunes of the championship Colonial team is pride—a fierce, deep-rooted pride that defies defeat. In the words of Bill Paquette, "Pride wins ballgames". As a coach, Mr. Paquette has succeeded in developing a prideful team, a team that reflects credit on themselves, their school, and their distinguished coach.

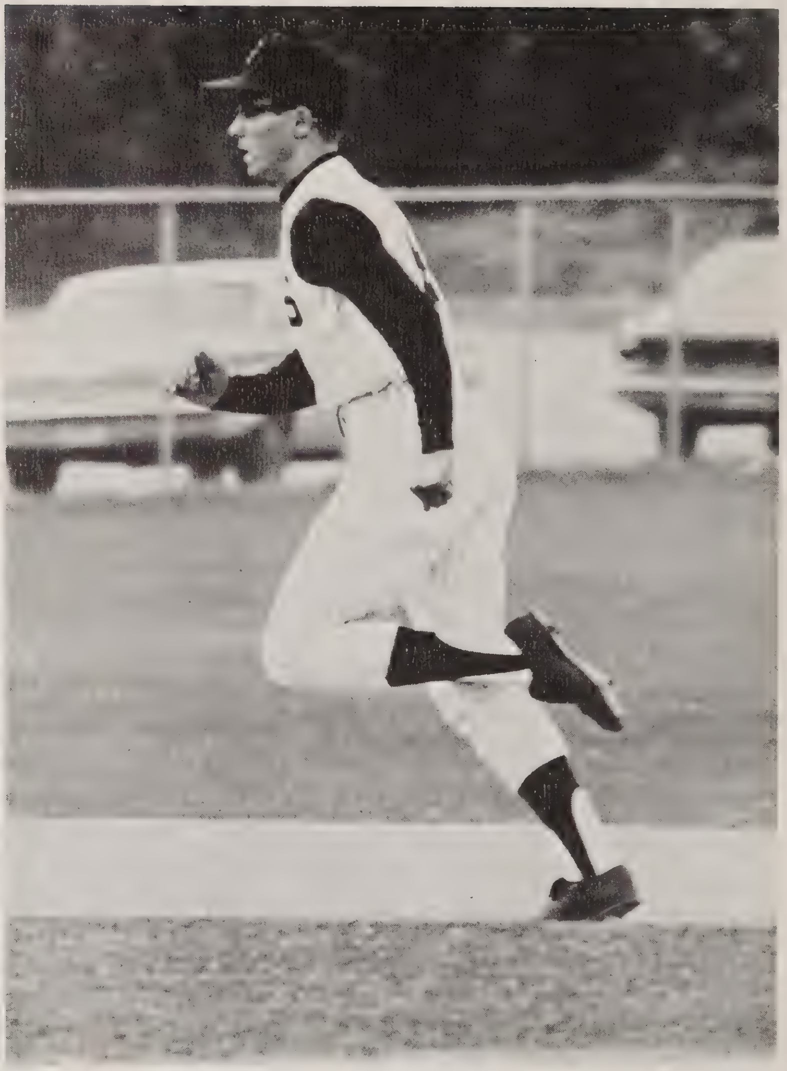
A jubilant Colonial team proudly displays its trophy following a choice victory over Westboro in the Clark Tournament.

Hustling centerfielder Bill Robinson appears to be quite overcome following his great catch of a fly ball.



Colonial teams have long been noted for their base-running ability.

Frank Viscardi, Henry Grampietro, Dave Zeek, and Vin Moore don't seem to be overly concerned with the action on the field.

Early April signifies the advent of the nation's most popular pastime—baseball. At Shrewsbury High, Coach Mike Kleminich is never displeased with the competitive spirit of the prospective candidates who invade the ballfield during the initial practice sessions. When the final team is chosen, Mr. Kleminich begins an intensive program of working to instill pride, aggresiveness, and hustle into each member of his varsity squad. Practice sessions emphasize running, throwing, and hitting. Eventually, a superior ball club emerges—a club that thrives on adversity, a ball club that is in every sense a TEAM.

To understand the success of the Shrewsbury High nine, one need go no further than Coach Kleminich. A dedicated and volatile coach, Mr. Kleminich consistently produces outstanding teams. The key to his success is his ability to inspire tremendous dedication on the part of each of his ball players. With Mike Kleminich, there is such a thing as 200% effort. Traditionally, a Colonial baseball team exhibits the characteristics which typify their coach, fiery competitiveness and a deep-rooted love for baseball. Shrewsbury has never realized a losing season with Mike Kleminich as baseball coach.

Capers

Firm believers in the phrase "practice makes perfect" are Dave McGuiness, Frank Viscardi, and Joe Faucher, the last players to leave the ballfield.

Practice session always begins with a warm-up exercise. Third baseman Paul Morello and outfielder Bill Robinson demonstrate their strong throwing arms.

Coach Mike Kleminich, face taut and hands thrust deep in his pockets, is outwardly disturbed by the umpire's decision.

Bill Robinson takes a mighty swing and then grimaces in anguish as the ball whips by.

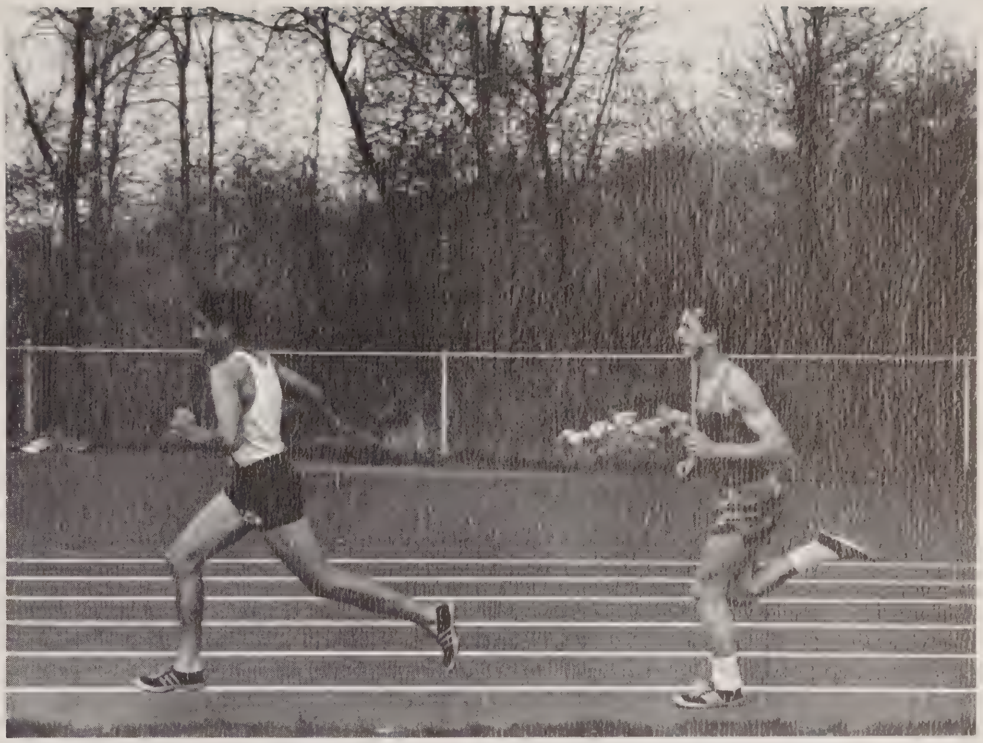
Burly Ken Buccico, "Dancing Bear," awes the crowd with a mammoth heave.

Southpaw Ken Phoenix uncorks a mighty throw in the discus event.

Legs churning, three Shrewsbury harriers are off and running in the 100-yard dash.

the Cinders

A number of track and field enthusiasts combine their specific talents to make up the 1968 Blue and Gold track team. More so than any other athletic event, track requires an absolute individual effort on the part of each of the contestants. In order for a school to score highly in a meet, each member of that team must perform well in his special event. Shrewsbury has always fared well in CMC track competition because of some outstanding trackmen and because of coach Arthur Liljegran. Whether in the dashes, the broad jump, the shot-put, or the distance runs, Coach Liljegran is there to point out any flaws or to offer praise. Colonial track teams attest to the superb guidance of Arthur Liljegran.



Steve Wyeth is content to run a close second until the opportune moment arrives to make his final move.

Coach Arthur Liljegren certifies the results of the 100-yard dash by consulting his stop-watch.

During a lull between events, the boys relax and enjoy listening to Howie Ahlstrand's choice comments.

Cross country is not a spectator sport. Here, the runners are strung out along a section of Route 140 just below the Route 9 bridge.

Amidst a heavily wooded section of town, Robin Hood and his merry men—actually, they are three Shrewsbury harriers—go fleeting by.

ong Run

After a particularly brutal practice, the boys dress in their sweat suits and prepare to return to the school.

The tri-captains of the cross country team are Tom Marston, Steve Wyeth, and Ritch Fletcher.

Very few athletic events demand as much stamina or emphasize as great individual effort as does the cross country run. The name of the event is appropriate and self-explanatory. Races vary according to distance from 2.8 miles to 3 miles; the apparent strategy of the runner is to get a quick start, maintain a steady pace, and terminate with a strong "finishing kick." Scoring a cross country meet is interesting: points are awarded on a placement basis, one point for first place, two for second, etc. . . . The team with the least total points wins.

As is evident of all Colonial sports teams, the Shrewsbury harriers possess a great deal of spirit. However, cross country is not such a popular sport. Although the desire is present, the talent is somewhat scarce because cross country conflicts with football. This year's team, under the guidance of Coach Mike Kleminich, won their share of meets. Also, since the team's members were comparatively young, the future of the Blue and Gold's cross country forces is extremely bright.

Ward Hill is the training area as the runners limber-up before a meet.

Wiry Dan Rubado completes his swing while watching his tee shot.

Squatting over in the form of ancient Buddha, husky Dave Kern lines up a crucial putt.

Babe Ruth once said that baseball was the nation's greatest game. But Mr. William Coulter and his golf bums would decidedly disagree with Mr. Ruth's statement. As soon as the snow clears and the ground becomes reasonably dry in the spring, Mr. Coulter and his team are out on the fairways and putting greens.

Shrewsbury's golfers are a motley-dressed, personable group of athletes. They practice faithfully and they win consistently. The domineering characteristic of the present team is their flair for the game. Because of the lack of availability of a country club, the boys have improvised: rigorous practice sessions are held daily at treacherous, demanding St. Andrew's Golf Course—more affectionately known as Ricker's Pitch and Putt. But practice is practice no matter where the location and the team is certainly devoted to their coach and to reflecting honor upon their school. Several young promising golfers will undoubtedly propel our golf team to new heights and great acclamation this year.

Lake Quinsigamond provides an ideal course for any type of aquatic event. Shrewsbury High's crew team has taken full advantage of the availability of the lake. In the spring through late autumn, the oarsmen are out in the shells rowing for ten miles daily. Crew is a back-breaking sport. At times the strain on the rowers is unbearable and the accomplishments in a particular day appear futile. But the extensive training eventually proves rewarding whenever the races are held. The Colonial crew always achieves admirably.

Whether playing or watching—they are in the game one hundred percent!

The frigid and wet days of winter slowly approached and the spirited girls of Shrewsbury High set out to make themselves known on the basketball courts. Under the leadership of co-captains Judy Donahue and Sue Sanders, over one-hundred girls tried out hoping they'd be the one selected to fill one of the twenty-two positions. Starting from scratch, Miss Judy Webster, this year's new coach, carefully made the difficult selection of the 1968 squad.

The long rides on the cold buses, new songs learned, new faces seen and the competition of team against team along with teamwork were the experiences felt by each girl. The rewards of being on the basketball team for the three departing seniors are great and many but the close friends made and the moments of victories and defeats experienced stand out in making them to be better persons.

A pair of Field Hockey shoes, a stick, some shin guards, a sphere, courage, drive, speed, a good coach, willingness to learn and teach, and spirit in victories and defeats . . . the ingredients to a successful Field Hockey season.

Senior Ann Collins and Co-Captain Sue Sanders unite in a winning team effort.

"Sticks down! Drive."

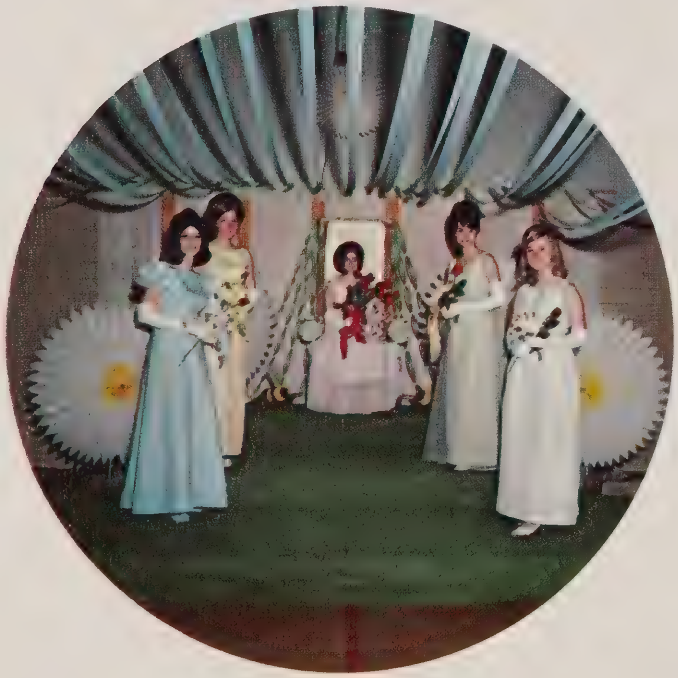
Undaunted by the cold, fall air, or the long, tiresome, and vigorous hours of practice, the girls' enthusiasm remained at a pinnacle throughout the short season. The situations encountered, the leadership involved and the new friends made were experienced in another year of hard work. Under the leadership of coach, Mrs. Barbara Caron, and co-captains Judy Donahue and Sue Sanders, the largest group of girls ever to go out for Field Hockey were rapidly trained and uniformed to represent our fabulous school. A new tradition of burying pennies commenced and the girls excitedly ran onto the field with hopes of a Shrewsbury victory. The blue and gold uniforms, sticks, SHS sweatshirts, shin guards, and the newly acquired hockey shoes are now in their boxes waiting to be worn again by another successful Shrewsbury High squad. It's hard to say good-bye to SHS and to something you've become a part of for so many years, but for the seven retiring seniors, a musty team room, a dampened field, the close friends formed, and the supporting sound of cheering onlookers have been fond memories of rewarding experiences.

The Seniors—the last time they'd be to-gether as a Team.

"A Taste

The class officers and their escorts lead the grand march.

Under a canopy of ice-blue crepe George Gregory's orchestra filled the air with music. Sophisticated juniors were captivated by the elegant simplicity of the pastel world that surrounded them. Bright faces reflected the excitement of the evening as couples danced gracefully amidst the daisies. With the grand march the evening's events reached a climax as Ruth Chaput was chosen queen to reign with her court: Pam Gordon, Donna Miller, Chris Janulavitch, and Wendy Midgley.



Mr. Cooke enjoys a dance with Donna Sutherland.

Everyone dances to "A Taste of Honey" by George Gregory's Orchestra.

of Honey"

Couples await the grand march and the coronation of the queen.

Ruth Chaput and Ted Crommett, her escort, obligingly pose for one last picture.

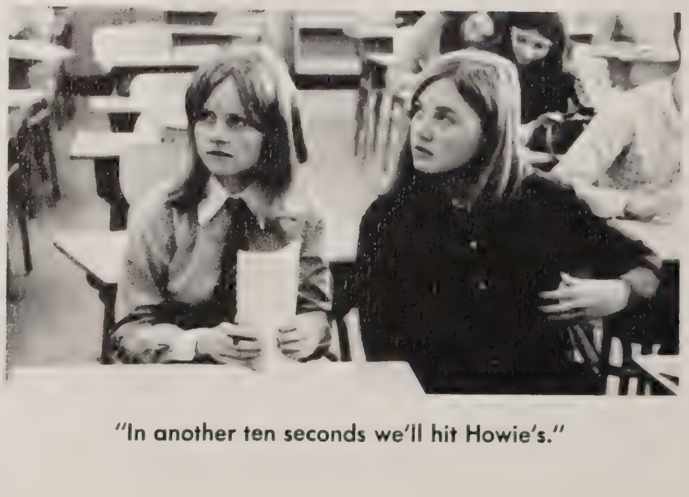
Joyce Cote and Karen Kilburn, with their escorts circle in front of the judges who will soon announce the queen.

Ah . . . mystery meat!

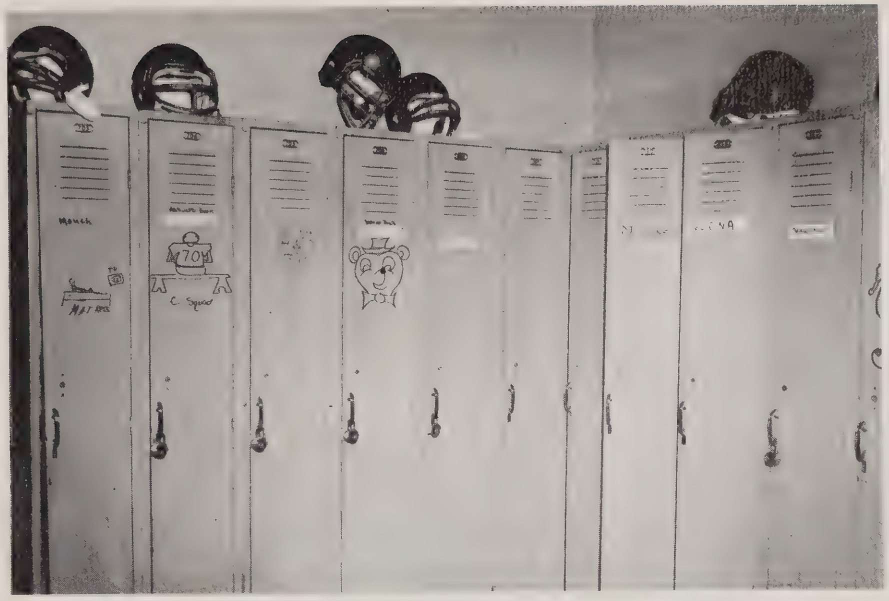
The White Knight in disguise.

"Just what I like to do . . . baby-sit on a Saturday afternoon!"

"What's happening?"



"In another ten seconds we'll hit Howie's."



"Now that the smelly football players have gone, we can breathe again."

Glory"

In a muddy battle with the Auburn Dandies, Shrewsbury was triumphant in the last game of the 1968 football season. Weeks spent training and working to achieve a winning season for Shrewsbury High came to an end with our victory dance, "Autumn Glory".

The evening began with dancing to music by the "Unstrung Poets". Early in the evening everyone crowded around the bandstand as Bill Mattress received the Most Valuable Player Award. The coach graciously accepted his plaque as the team proudly applauded. The victory cake was ceremoniously cut and distributed as everyone awaited the grand march. Marsha Webster was chosen queen. Under bright orange streamers she reigned with dignity until the evening came to a close. Only a few scraps of cornstalk hastily strewn upon the floor remained . . . remnants of a winning season and our last year at Shrewsbury High.

FAREWELL SENIORS

Tennyson

“Softly as I

In no way did the excitement of the evening affect the ravenous appetites of the seniors.

Excited nominees to the Court twirl, once around lightly, as the judges ponder a most difficult decision.

DINNER DANCE

June 7, 1968

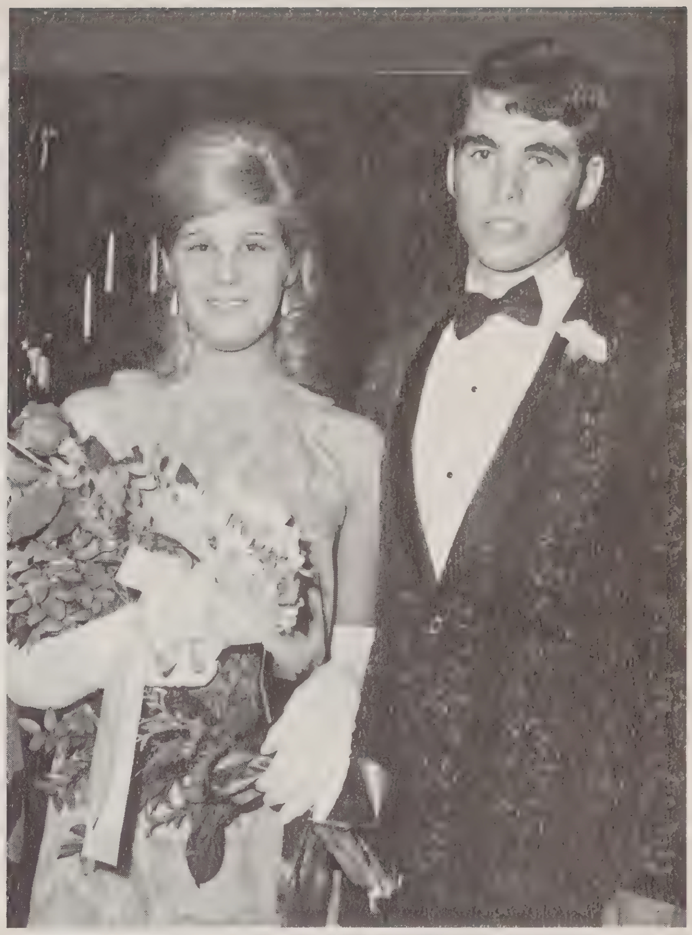
Senior officers present a token of esteem to Mr. Horgan, Mrs. McCullough, Miss Murphy, Mr. Ferris, and Miss Howard for their years of service as Class Advisors.

Unlike other years, the Class of 1968, held a formal dinner-dance at the Yankee Drummer Inn in Auburn. The atmosphere was one of reminiscence and sentiment, for it marked the last time we would share this type of sociability that had become so much a part of our four years together.

Seniors and their escorts participate in the Grand March.

Leave You . . ."

"We could have danced all night . . ."



Suzanne Sheperd, a glamorous queen, poses with Norman Rollo, her handsome escort for the evening.

The traditional "tears of happiness" as the decision of the judges is announced.

It was a never-to-be-forgotten evening—sophisticated and grandly mature—a fitting climax to herald the reflection of our adolescent years.

And when, too soon, the time to depart was upon us, one could almost hear the unspoken unity of the single sentiment: "'softly, as I leave you,' I will carry with me this special time we shared."

The queen and her entourage: Sue Borgland, Joyce Cote, Suzanne Sheperd, Eileen Friars and Mary Previe.

"You'll Never

CLASS DAY

JUNE 12, 1968

Class Day, and all the excitement that marks the occasion! Are the Yearbooks ready? Are the entertainers in place? Where are the flowers? A glow of excitement and last-minute jitters, as the speakers review their remarks. A fun time. A time to display talents, and relive the nostalgic memories of the four years that passed all too swiftly. A time to single out the one individual, from so many, who gave so unselfishly to the success and happiness of others. A special and unique time, that will always live as a precious memory. And, as the class joins as one in its song "You'll Never Walk Alone," a lasting promise that the years we've shared have cemented bonds of friendship that will not erode with time!

Wendy Midgely and Stu Pouliot distribute flowers to Carol Sharpe and Cheryl Daviau.

Class Marshal, Joseph Raulinaitis, receives last-minute instructions from Miss Howard.

A touch of solemnity marks the Class Day Processional.

Walk Alone"

The thrilling tenor voice of Brian MacLeod, lent magic to the beautiful aria "Somewhere."

COGITO, ERGO SUM

Russell Staples and Michael Cramer complete a well-executed Clarinet duet.

A standing ovation for an "outstanding" Advisor, as Susan Douslin presents the 1968 Yearbook to Miss Pauline S. Howard to whom it was dedicated.

A Fitting

The bus is loaded, and seniors spill from the windows waving a "regretful" goodbye to school for the day!

"Mumps or no mumps, I'm going on this trip . . ."

"Well, now that we're here—where's the action?"

CLASS TRIPS

June 13, 1968

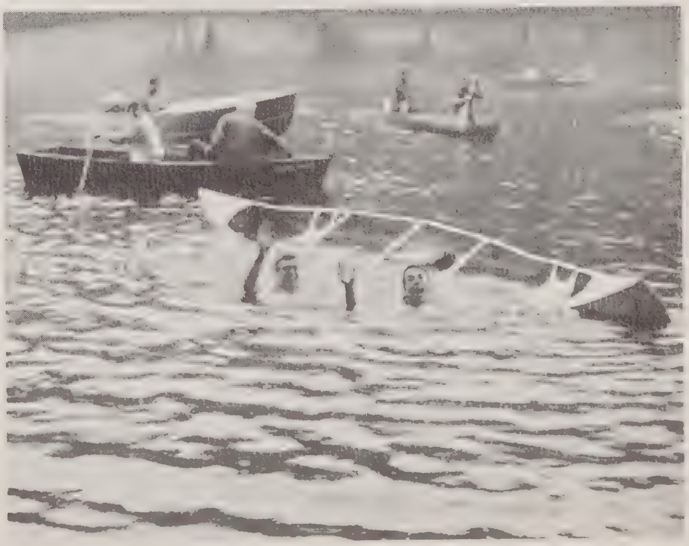
Host "Cuckoo" presents Stu Pouliot with his very own "Ted Hilton Chapeau."

Final Fling!

After a rough game of softball, the boys settle down to their magic act—making fried chicken disappear!

Bob Sweet, Linda Angelico, Bev Marcimo and Sue Ablondi display the day's delicacies.

Bill Mattress and Dave McGuiness on a crocodile hunt.



Crew Men Russ Staples and Ted White demonstrate what "not" to do in a canoe.

At poolside, the scenery was worthy of watching as Kathy Carey and Jean Willoughby "rain-bathed."

Wet . . .
Wearying . . .
but
Wonderful . . .

Joyce Cote models her "itsy bitsy, teeny weeny" striped bikini, before giving it the water test!

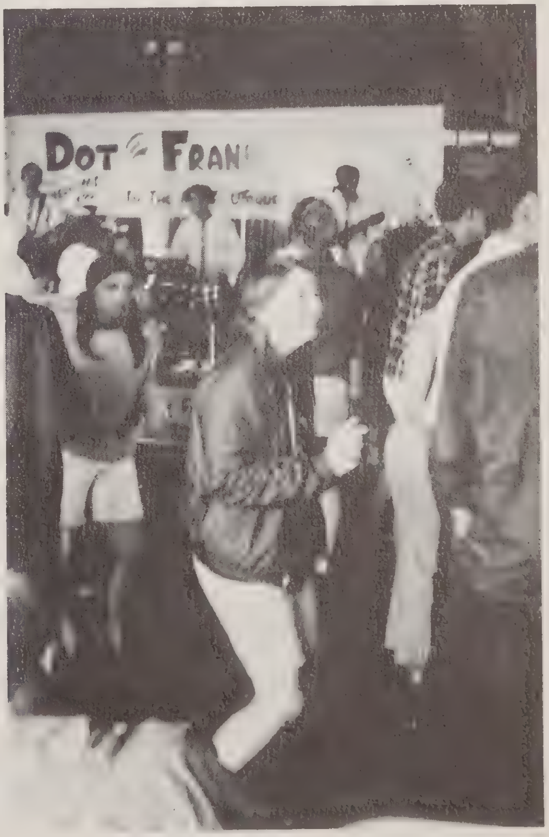
Ping-Pong anyone? Mr. Ferris displays his winning form.

It rained! It rained! And it rained some more! But nothing in this world could have dampened our spirits. It was our Class Trip and we were together—and nothing else was important. And so, resplendent in our craziest gear (looking more like high school dropouts than graduates) we defied the elements and pretended the sun was casting its most glorious glow. We ate, and sang, and swam, and danced, and played, and ate some more.

And then, just as the time approached for us to leave Ted Hilton's Resort, in Moodus, Connecticut—old "Sol" peeked from behind a cloud and winked his eye —sorry, perhaps, that he had blown his chance to watch Shrewsbury Seniors enjoying their final "wild fling!"

"Aw, come on gang—it's no wetter in the pool than it is out here!"

"Cuckoo" hears some gems of wisdom from Mary-Lou Garganigo.



The "Rain Dance"—too deftly executed by Judy Donahue.

“Cogito;

Graduates, in preparation for their final processional.

Stuart Pouliot, senior president, presents Mr. Cooke with the class gift.

GRADUATION

June 14, 1968

June 14, 1968! The strains of the high school orchestra filled the auditorium, signalling the graduation Processional, and the crowd stood in sombre silence as the seniors marched, in practiced unison, toward their assigned places on stage. Tear-stained cheeks were not an uncommon sight, as parents and graduates alike fought back sentiments that were an uncommon blend of sadness and pride. We had attained our long-sought goal, and the symbolic blue-and-gold diploma marked the tangible symbol of a passing chapter in the pages of our lives.

COGITO ERGO SUM

A warm welcome is extended to the parents and friends who filled the auditorium in tribute to the graduates.

Ergo Sum"

Paul Callan expressed his firm conviction that the young people of today are truly "A Unique Generation."

Charles Kaufman, Shrewsbury's answer to Albert Einstein, accepts the coveted Science Award.

Hugs and warm congratulations for a job well done!

In bold print, suspended overhead, burnished the words "Cogito; Ergo Sum" a fitting motto that spoke not only of our accomplishments during the past four years, but gave promise of our philosophy for the years to come: "I Think; Therefore I Am."

And so, we will face the trials of tomorrow with understanding and confidence, aware that "thought" is the nourishment of man, and his desire to seek truth is his hope and salvation for the future.

The years have passed—four in all—and each holds its special memory. They were good years—years of learning and developing, of solidarity and belonging—a time when we became a part of all those we met.

Now, the hour has come to break our ties with the past, and set our sights on the future. It would be a callous misconception to say that this will be an easy task. It will be a difficult one, indeed. For here, within the strong confines of cold mortar and brick, we gathered a multitude of warm and vital memories. Here, we cemented the bonds of friendship, and shared the exhilaration of our victories and the remorse of our defeats. Here, rings the ever-haunting sound of our laughter in the halls, and the low drone of recognized voices sifting from the classrooms. Here, we played and participated, worked and wondered, listened and learned. Here, walks the familiar figures and faces of educators and administrators, who played such an integral part in our lives, and who cultured and cultivated a dominant part of our thinking. Here, we were known and, here, we became a part of all those we met.

We learned much in four years. We learned to reason and to think, and to assume responsibility. We learned to appreciate the beauty of music and art, and bask in the thrill of participation. We learned to memorize, and synthesize, and rationalize. We learned to savor the wealth of words, and to wrestle with their meaning. We learned to cultivate an insatiable desire to find, and mold, and understand the truth. We learned that the process of learning was one that knows no end.

And, so it was that we prepared ourselves for this eventuality—this time when we must sever the bonds of a lifetime, and face the future alone. However, we will not soon forget this place of our youth . . . this school that sowed and shaped the seeds of our destiny. One day, each of us will say with innate pride: "it was there my mind was nurtured and fed . . . it was there the light of friendship gave substance to my growth . . . it was there I dreamed my dreams and spun my fantasies . . . it was there I planted my roots, and realized the fruit of my manhood. And, gratefully, I AM A PART OF ALL THAT I HAVE MET, and, in turn, all that I met became the essence of all that I am."

We move forward now, two-hundred-and-thirty strong. We face a world of conflict and trial. Yet, we still our fears, strong in the conviction that we are a determined generation; and, in that determination, we will do what must be done. Our love of liberty, and pride in country will not let us turn our backs on responsibility. We, the Class of 1968, are ready and able to face the challenge of the future. And, God willing, we will fulfill our destiny with the honor and integrity with which we have been so aptly, and generously, endowed.

"Softly as I

In no way did the excitement of the evening affect the ravenous appetites of the seniors.

Excited nominees to the Court twirl, once around lightly, as the judges ponder a most difficult decision.

DINNER DANCE

June 7, 1968

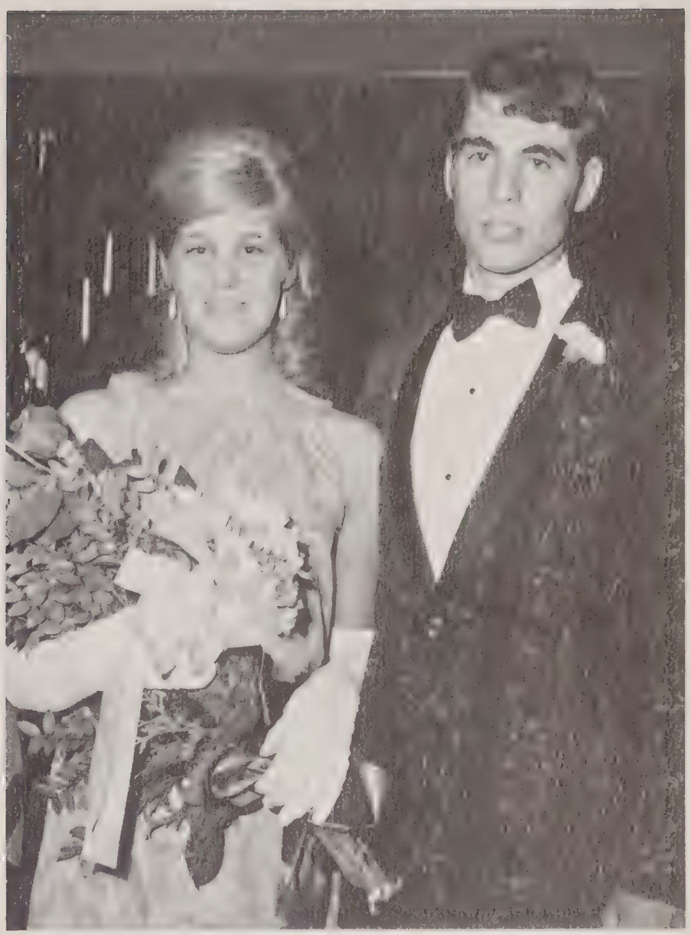
Senior officers present a token of esteem to Mr. Horgan, Mrs. McCullough, Miss Murphy, Mr. Ferris, and Miss Howard for their years of service as Class Advisors.

Unlike other years, the Class of 1968, held a formal dinner-dance at the Yankee Drummer Inn in Auburn. The atmosphere was one of reminiscence and sentiment, for it marked the last time we would share this type of sociability that had become so much a part of our four years together.

Seniors and their escorts participate in the Grand March.

Leave You..."

"We could have danced all night . . ."



Suzanne Sheperd, a glamorous queen, poses with Norman Rollo, her handsome escort for the evening.

The traditional "tears of happiness" as the decision of the judges is announced.

It was a never-to-be-forgotten evening—sophisticated and grandly mature—a fitting climax to herald the reflection of our adolescent years.

And when, too soon, the time to depart was upon us, one could almost hear the unspoken unity of the single sentiment: "'softly, as I leave you,' I will carry with me this special time we shared."

CLASS DAY

JUNE 12, 1968

Wendy Midgely and Stu Pouliot distribute flowers to Carol Sharpe and Cheryl Daviau.

Class Day, and all the excitement that marks the occasion! Are the Yearbooks ready? Are the entertainers in place? Where are the flowers? A glow of excitement and last-minute jitters, as the speakers review their remarks. A fun time. A time to display talents, and relive the nostalgic memories of the four years that passed all too swiftly. A time to single out the one individual, from so many, who gave so unselfishly to the success and happiness of others. A special and unique time, that will always live as a precious memory. And, as the class joins as one in its song "You'll Never Walk Alone," a lasting promise that the years we've shared have cemented bonds of friendship that will not erode with time!

Class Marshal, Joseph Raulinaitis, receives last-minute instructions from Miss Howard.

A touch of solemnity marks the Class Day Processional.

Walk Alone"

The thrilling tenor voice of Brian MacLeod, lent magic to the beautiful aria "Somewhere."

COGITO, ERGO SUM

Russell Staples and Michael Cramer complete a well-executed Clarinet duet.

A standing ovation for an "outstanding" Advisor, as Susan Douslin presents the 1968 Yearbook to Miss Pauline S. Howard to whom it was dedicated.

A Fitting

The bus is loaded, and seniors spill from the windows waving a "regretful" goodbye to school for the day!

"Mumps or no mumps, I'm going on this trip . . ."

"Well, now that we're here—where's the action?"

CLASS TRIPS

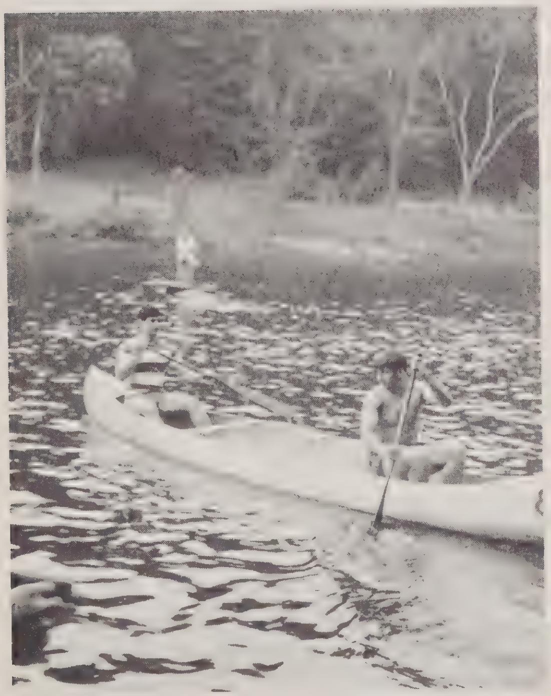
June 13, 1968

Host "Cuckoo" presents Stu Pouliot with his very own "Ted Hilton Chapeau."

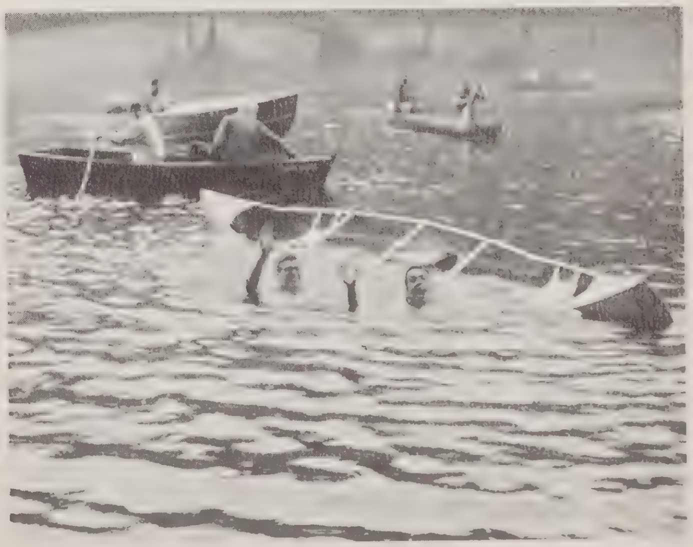
Final Fling!

After a rough game of softball, the boys settle down to their magic act—making fried chicken disappear!

Bob Sweet, Linda Angelico, Bev Marcimo and Sue Ablondi display the day's delicacies.



Bill Mattress and Dave McGuiness on a crocodile hunt.



Crew Men Russ Staples and Ted White demonstrate what "not" to do in a canoe.

At poolside, the scenery was worthy of watching as Kathy Carey and Jean Willoughby "rain-bathed."

Wet...
Wearying...
but Wonderful...

Joyce Cote models her "itsy bitsy, teeny weeny" striped bikini, before giving it the water test!

Ping-Pong anyone? Mr. Ferris displays his winning form.

It rained! It rained! And it rained some more! But nothing in this world could have dampened our spirits. It was our Class Trip and we were together—and nothing else was important. And so, resplendent in our craziest gear (looking more like high school dropouts than graduates) we defied the elements and pretended the sun was casting its most glorious glow. We ate, and sang, and swam, and danced, and played, and ate some more.

And then, just as the time approached for us to leave Ted Hilton's Resort, in Moodus, Connecticut—old "Sol" peeked from behind a cloud and winked his eye —sorry, perhaps, that he had blown his chance to watch Shrewsbury Seniors enjoying their final "wild fling!"

"Aw, come on gang—it's no wetter in the pool than it is out here!"

"Cuckoo" hears some gems of wisdom from Mary-Lou Garganigo.

The "Rain Dance"—too deftly executed by Judy Donahue.

"Cogito;

Graduates, in preparation for their final processional.

Stuart Pouliot, senior president, presents Mr. Cooke with the class gift.

GRADUATION

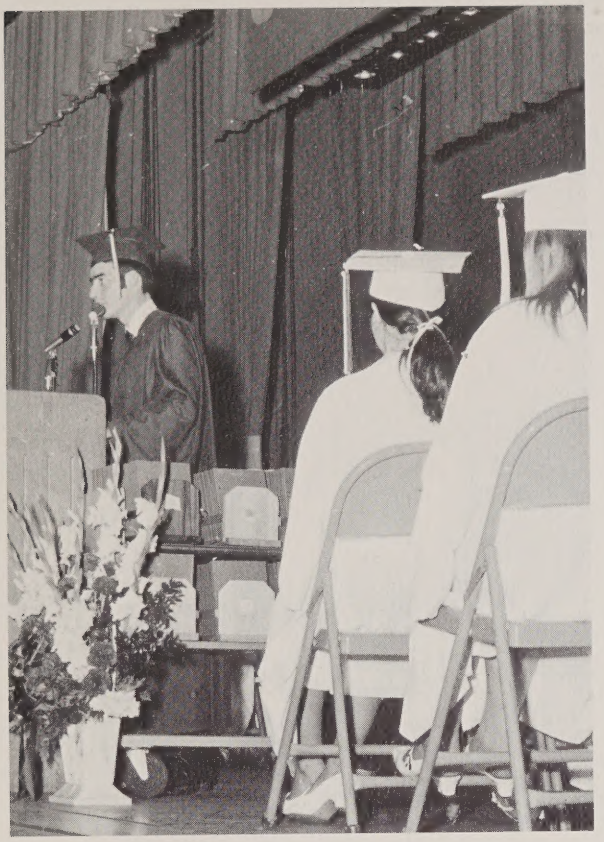
June 14, 1968

June 14, 1968! The strains of the high school orchestra filled the auditorium, signalling the graduation Processional, and the crowd stood in sombre silence as the seniors marched, in practiced unison, toward their assigned places on stage. Tear-stained cheeks were not an uncommon sight, as parents and graduates alike fought back sentiments that were an uncommon blend of sadness and pride. We had attained our long-sought goal, and the symbolic blue-and-gold diploma marked the tangible symbol of a passing chapter in the pages of our lives.

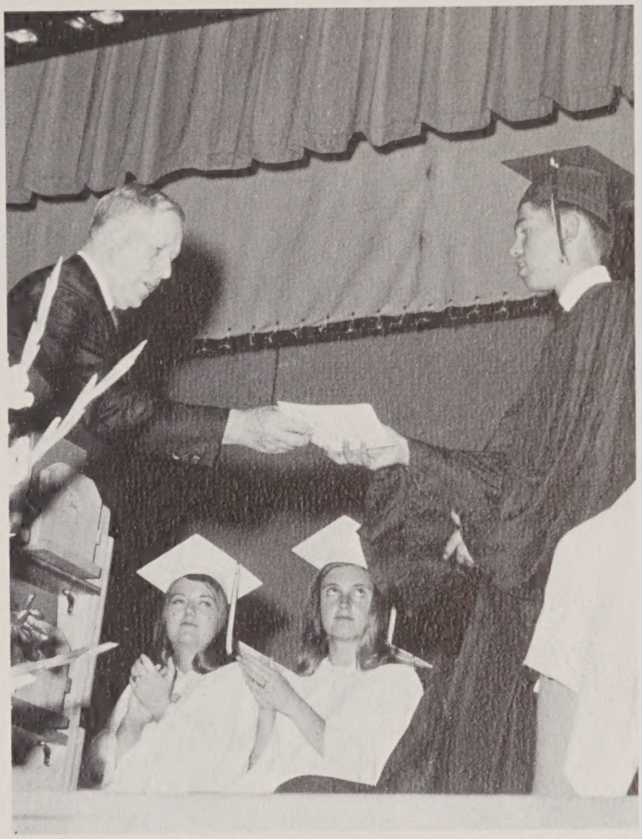
COGITO,ERGO SUM

A warm welcome is extended to the parents and friends who filled the auditorium in tribute to the graduates.

Ergo Sum"



Paul Callan expressed his firm conviction that the young people of today are truly "A Unique Generation."



Charles Kaufman, Shrewsbury's answer to Albert Einstein, accepts the coveted Science Award.

Hugs and warm congratulations for a job well done!

In bold print, suspended overhead, burnished the words "Cogito; Ergo Sum" a fitting motto that spoke not only of our accomplishments during the past four years, but gave promise of our philosophy for the years to come: "I Think; Therefore I Am."

And so, we will face the trials of tomorrow with understanding and confidence, aware that "thought" is the nourishment of man, and his desire to seek truth is his hope and salvation for the future.

The years have passed—four in all—and each holds its special memory. They were good years—years of learning and developing, of solidarity and belonging—a time when we became a part of all those we met.

Now, the hour has come to break our ties with the past, and set our sights on the future. It would be a callous misconception to say that this will be an easy task. It will be a difficult one, indeed. For here, within the strong confines of cold mortar and brick, we gathered a multitude of warm and vital memories. Here, we cemented the bonds of friendship, and shared the exhilaration of our victories and the remorse of our defeats. Here, rings the ever-haunting sound of our laughter in the halls, and the low drone of recognized voices sifting from the classrooms. Here, we played and participated, worked and wondered, listened and learned. Here, walks the familiar figures and faces of educators and administrators, who played such an integral part in our lives, and who cultured and cultivated a dominant part of our thinking. Here, we were known and, here, we became a part of all those we met.

We learned much in four years. We learned to reason and to think, and to assume responsibility. We learned to appreciate the beauty of music and art, and bask in the thrill of participation. We learned to memorize, and synthesize, and rationalize. We learned to savor the wealth of words, and to wrestle with their meaning. We learned to cultivate an insatiable desire to find, and mold, and understand the truth. We learned that the process of learning was one that knows no end.

And, so it was that we prepared ourselves for this eventuality—this time when we must sever the bonds of a lifetime, and face the future alone. However, we will not soon forget this place of our youth . . . this school that sowed and shaped the seeds of our destiny. One day, each of us will say with innate pride: "it was there my mind was nurtured and fed . . . it was there the light of friendship gave substance to my growth . . . it was there I dreamed my dreams and spun my fantasies . . . it was there I planted my roots, and realized the fruit of my manhood. And, gratefully, I AM A PART OF ALL THAT I HAVE MET, and, in turn, all that I met became the essence of all that I am."
